WHAT GETS IN THE WAY

9 What makes it hard to personalize a tour? Select all that apply.

- [ ] Not enough time between appointments
- [ ] Walk-ins with no inquiry details
- [ ] I worry personal questions could raise Fair Housing concerns
- [ ] Other
- [ ] I know little about the prospect before they arrive
- [ ] I'm not sure which questions to ask
- [ ] We're expected to follow a standard route

10 What makes follow-up harder? Select all that apply.

- [ ] Too many leads to keep up with
- [ ] I'm not sure what to say beyond “thanks for visiting”
- [ ] Someone else handles follow-up
- [ ] No reminder or task in the CRM
- [ ] Prospects rarely respond
- [ ] Other

HOW YOU LIKE TO LEARN

11 Where would you most likely use tour training?

- ○ On my phone between tours
- ○ In team meetings
- ○ At a desk
- ○ Shadowing a teammate

12 Which would help you most? Choose up to two.

- [ ] Short videos of real tours
- [ ] Role-play with teammates
- [ ] A quick-reference card on my phone
- [ ] Practicing realistic scenarios
- [ ] Feedback from my manager on a real tour
- [ ] Hearing how top performers tour

IN YOUR WORDS

13 Think of your best tour in the last month. What made it work?

14 What's one thing you wish you'd learned sooner about giving tours?

Thank you. Your answers shape what we build.

DESIGNER'S NOTE: HOW EACH QUESTION IS USED

Run before design starts to size the gap and find barriers, then again at 90 days. The confidence questions map to the four tour stages, so the same items become a before-and-after measure.

- Q4 to Q8 set the baseline for each tour stage and are repeated at 90 days.
- Q9 and Q10 separate skill gaps from time and system barriers, such as a missing CRM task.
- Q9's Fair Housing option shows whether the training needs to make asking safe.
- Q11 and Q12 confirm the mobile-first, practice-heavy format before it's built.
- Q13 and Q14 supply real moments for scenarios and persona cards.
