Tour Key Card

The coaching-to-decision model, in your pocket.

LUXURY LIVING CO.
LEASING ASSOCIATES

Just ask, at every step

Listen for buying signals: "I could see my desk there." "This is so quiet." Ask in the moment.

- "You've mentioned the quiet twice. Want me to hold it for you?"
- "Is this the one, or is something still missing?"
- Not yet? "What would you need to feel ready?"

STEP 1

Build the relationship

Greet them by name and use one detail from their inquiry. Then frame to engage: share a plan for the visit and check that it works.

"I'd love to start by hearing what you're looking for, then show you the homes that fit, and save a few minutes at the end for next steps. Sound good?"

STEP 2

Understand the need

Ask at least three open questions about their life, timing and decision before you open a door.

"What will a typical weekday look like once you move?"

STEP 3

Make a recommendation

Recommend one home and the two or three amenities that fit. Say why, in their words. Skip what doesn't matter to them.

"Based on your night shifts, I'd recommend 214. It's on the quiet side, and the dog run is a two-minute walk."

STEP 4

Set up next steps

Agree on one next step with a day and time. Say it out loud. Follow up personally within 24 hours.

"I'll hold 214 until Monday at 5 and text you photos tonight. Does that work?"

Discovery questions

- What's bringing you to the area?
- What does a typical weekday look like for you?
- What do you love about where you live now? What would you change?
- Who else is moving with you, people or pets?
- When do you need to move, and what else are you considering?
- What would make this an easy yes for you?

24-HOUR FOLLOW-UP

Hi [Name], it was great meeting you today. Here are the photos of [home] and [the amenity they cared about]. [One personal detail from the tour.] I'm holding [home] until [day and time]. Want to [next step]?

Fair Housing: ask, don't assume

Personalize only from what the prospect chooses to share. Never guess what someone needs from how they look or sound, and offer every prospect the same specials.